Dragonfly on Red-Green
 This shade is somewhat similar to the Change (Fig. of figure 242) except that the color scheme is the green tone appearing at the top of the shade (22) more than appears even one of green-orange (19) the dark green of the middle row is drawn into the light of the shade, and is particularly intense in the light of oblique segments. Travelling downward, the green gradually changes to yellow. In ascending rows glass is tinted with red, which produces an overall effect in the shade with yellow, red, finally, and with deep white.
 The bodies of the insects are orange, tinged with the reds and yellows, and the wings yellow with strong brown. The joints are yellow and orange, making strong contrast that already exists between the green and red.
 This shade has been repaired. It is signed and is 1307.
